

Wyoming State Bar

Annual Meeting & Judicial Conference

October 1, - 4, 2019

Jackson Lake Lodge

Moran, Wyoming (inside Grand Teton National Park)

Invitation from the President

Dear Colleagues,

It is truly my pleasure to cordially invite you all to the 2019 Wyoming State Bar Annual Meeting & Judicial Conference at the historic Jackson Lake Lodge in Moran, Wyoming, on October 1st through the 4th of this year. Nothing compares to the majestic beauty of Grand Teton National Park in the fall.

This year, the Officers, Commissioners and staff of the Wyoming State Bar wanted to offer everyone something unique—a chance to emerge from behind the bench or a busy practice to take a breath and relax in picturesque surroundings. A chance to finally catch up with old friends, colleagues or law school classmates. A chance to spend some quality time with your family outdoors and away from the electronics and day-to-day grind (don't worry... the Lodge has Wi-Fi throughout now). It is all available at this year's Annual Meeting & Judicial Conference...along with a dynamic schedule of both nationally acclaimed speakers as well as state specialists. Seventeen continuing legal education credits in all (including 8.5 ethics credits) at an affordable price and with off-season rates beginning in/around the Jackson Hole area!

Kara Ellsbury and her Continuing Legal Education Committee have done a fantastic job on this year's programming. On Wednesday morning, Mark Lanterman presents a captivating ethical plenary session entitled "Easiest Catch: Don't Be Another Fish in the Dark Net" whereby he includes practical measures lawyers and judges can take to protect sensitive data (WATCH OUT—this guy can and has hacked into the home addresses, social security numbers and cell phones of the Justices of the United States Supreme Court with minimal effort). Continue onto the Judicial Luncheon with renowned author and Judge Martin Clark, who was heralded by The New York Times as "the thinking man's John Grisham" and by Entertainment Weekly as "hands down, our finest legal-thriller writer." You also won't want to miss on Thursday morning Michael Tigar's, Emeritus Professor at Duke Law School and American University's Washington College of Law, plenary session entitled "Learning and Telling the Stories of Your Case." With over 50 years of litigation experience, hear some new insights on lawyering, and if you wonder whether Michael Tigar will have some ideas you can take home to utilize, put his name into your favorite internet search engine before you attend.

If you choose on Thursday not to take the afternoon off to unwind, Los Angeles attorney Todd Melnik will join us to show and discuss his homicide case that was featured in the Netflix documentary Long Shot. With over 28 years of criminal defense practice, including a TV career of legal commentary for Paramount Pictures, CNN, 60 Minutes, Good Morning America, The Today Show, ESPN and network news programs, Mr. Melnik will share a keynote address Thursday evening of his personal experiences with the criminal justice system, his philosophy on lawyering, and why it is so important for us as attorneys to listen to our clients and investigate their claims completely.

Did I forget to mention the multitude of exhibitors, the social events, available excursions, world class dining options and Yellowstone National Park only a few minutes away?

Travel safe to the northwest corner of Wyoming, and I look forward to meeting with you and enjoying everything this year's Annual Meeting & Judicial Conference has to offer.

Nothing WILL compare!

In the past year the Wyoming Supreme Court has refined its approach on several issues from homicide to prior acts evidence, suppression motions and self-defense. Recently "retired" prosecutor Paul Greenwood will draw upon his 22 years of prosecuting serious elder abuse cases to highlight an often-hidden crime that has been called "the silver tsunami" by our nation's Chief Justices of all 50 states. Others call it the "silent epidemic" and "the crime of the 21st century." Is it possible that your client is already a victim and you don't know? Greenwood will share red flags and offer tips on how to reduce the risk of a loved one or a client from becoming the next victim. He will also comment on the unsettling guardianship abuse case out of Las Vegas and challenge us as to whether there is an April Parks working in our community.

As a major exporter of both fossil and renewable energy, Wyoming is influenced by a growing number of low-carbon laws and policies that are in effect internationally, nationally, regionally and in many other states. These requirements generally apply to the production of primary energy (e.g., coal, natural gas and oil) and the subsequent use of that energy to generate electricity, transportation fuels and heat. Designed with the Wyoming practitioner in mind, this course will provide an overview of these requirements while highlighting the myriad of compliance risks and business opportunities associated with them.

1 CLE Credit/1 Ethics	The practice of law is a challenging and stressful profession. Intense study in law school, competition in our field, high stakes negotiations, long working hours, high burnout, adversarial colleagues, pressures to bill more hours...all add to the stress of our profession. Lawyers are not alone in their high stress profession. Certainly doctors, dentists, accountants, etc. have stressful occupations. "However, when the surgeon goes into the surgical suite to perform his surgery, they don't send another physician in to try to kill the patient." (Why are lawyers killing themselves? Ours is an adversarial profession by nature, compounding an already pressured occupation. Wyoming lawyers suffer from stress, anxiety, depression, lack of time, lack of breathing properly, hours of sitting at a desk hunched over a computer, hours of toiling at counsel table, along with the pressures of running a small business in a rural community. Living life in a small-town fish bowl can also lead lawyers down the path of severe depression, anger issues, substance abuse, divorce and ethical struggles. Yoga can help alleviate or reduce all of the above issues and assist in upholding our ethical obligations to our clients. Take a break on Friday morning and join your fellow attorneys for a mindful yoga practice. You can awaken your body and mind whilst earning ethics credit! This class is designed for all levels of yoga experience, including beginners. Yoga mats will be available, but if you have a mat, please bring it with you.

1 CLE Credit	The overriding issue when any witness testifies is his or her credibility. Your likelihood of securing a successful verdict is grounded in your ability to effectively attack the credibility of your adversary's witnesses. The success of your cross-examination hinges on two simple questions: What do I ask? and How do I ask it? In this dynamic and entertaining program, perhaps the best-known in the history of continuing legal education, two nationally recognized cross-examination experts answer those key questions.

BREAKOUT 2:	Justice Reinvestment: Redistribution Instead of Reinstitution (Part 1)  Speakers: Robert O. Lampert Wyoming Department of Corrections Cheyenne, Wyoming  Steve Lindley Wyoming Department of Corrections Cheyenne, Wyoming	To Be Determined
1 CLE Credit	Justice reinvestment in Wyoming is a data-driven approach to reduce the amount of money spent on corrections and reinvesting those savings in strategies that can reduce the rate of repeat offenders and increase public safety. This training will provide an understanding of the analysis of the data, policy development and implementation of recent criminal justice reform in Wyoming policies, programs, and enacted legislation.  For the last several years the Wyoming Department of Corrections (DOC) has urged lawmakers to implement several reforms that could reduce a growing prison population. Between 2008 and 2018, Wyoming's prison population increased 21% with the prison population projected to increase another 9% within the next five years. This growth would lead to a $51 million increase in spending, which will come straight out of taxpayers' pockets. An Interim Committee of the Wyoming Joint Judiciary (IC) was formed in 2017 to study criminal justice reform. Findings from data obtained from the Supreme Court and DOC for all courts and probation cases resulted in the Justice Center Council of State Governments (JCCSG) making numerous recommendations to the IC for policy reforms for probation and parole as well as the development of programs and legislation. The goal of this two-hour seminar is to review the data that drove the reform to decrease the number of repeat offenders and discuss other policy changes.
