OVERVIEW

As the legal cannabis industry diversifies and grows, so do the opportunities, obligations, and complex legal matters that law firms and their clients face.

Despite ongoing challenges around product legality and liability, banking, cross-border trade, ESG related issues, and a general lack of movement on federalization, legislative bodies, advocacy groups, and individual states continue to push legalization efforts forward, opening new routes to access and markets in the process.

The 2nd Annual Cannalaw Summit presented by Inside Practice, in association with the INCBA, will bring together diverse perspectives from boutiques to big law, in-house counsel, and subject matter experts from across the international cannabis supply chain.

Together they will provide critical insight into current and future laws and regulations, address critical individual cannabis practice and client advisory challenges, and examine core considerations and opportunities as the legal cannabis marketplace continues to evolve.

they didn't train you for this in Law School. Whether you are a sole practitioner, an equity partner at a growing firm, or manage a national set of offices that span multiple jurisdictions, combining excellent client service and top tier legal advice with a functional and sustainable business structure takes a combination of skills that a JD, more often than not, overlooks.

From unique cannabis ethics questions, to client development, to accounting, taking payments, and avoiding money laundering pitfalls, practice in the cannabis industry is just a bit of a different flavor than opening a traditional law firm. Come explore the ins and outs of launching a practice, expanding beyond your own jurisdictional borders, and avoiding the most common ethics and business pitfalls that will kneecap your firm's potential.

ESG x Cannabis: The Opportunities and the Obligations

MODERATOR
Marc Ross
Head of Impact & ESG
Vicente Sederberg

Environment, Social & Governance (“ESG”) has been a developing area of law over the past several years. The strategic engagement of internal and external stakeholders and the measurement and reporting of ESG metrics has become a business imperative and regulatory requirement for the operation of cannabis businesses. In this discussion, we will hear from experts from within and outside of the cannabis industry on these growing trends, how companies have successfully captured and reported ESG metrics, and gain guidance on getting started.
